SQUARE DEAL IS PROMISED BY BIGELOW

Bigelow is Then Delegated to Name Committees.

After WARM CONTEST

Resolution to Have All Committees of Constitutional Convention Named by Committee on Committees Selected by Congressman District Causes Upheaval and Withdrawn After Eloquent Appeal by Presiding Officer.

Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—President Bigelow, after a hard fight, succeeded in having the Lampson resolution which if adopted would have given him the power to name committees of the convention.
The Lampson plan contemplated the selection of the committees by a committee of one delegate from each congressional district, each committee to be named by the convention.

During the proceedings there were several lively clashes between the opposing forces, one of which came when President Bigelow refused to grant a point of order raised by Judge Fess of Greene county.
Bigelow refused to grant a point of order on a resolution proposed by Delegate Lampson, threatening to have the delegate removed if his point was not granted. He later receded.

Withdraws Resolution.

Opposition to the Bigelow plan for appointment of committees by president ceased when Mr. Lampson withdrew his resolution for committee of 21 withdrawn. President Bigelow had made a personal appeal to the delegates for the power of appointing the committees. He stated that the only way to bring the convention to a friendly basis was to ask him to name the committees and to promise to be absolutely fair to all interests concerned. Accepting the plea the convention withdrew the Lampson resolution and the president was authorized to make the appointments.

President Bigelow, after the smoke had cleared away, named the various committees on rules, which he adopted the duty rules and will manage the work of the convention. President Bigelow, Lampson of Indiana, Winn of Delaware, Hos-mer of Virginia, Doty of Cuyahoga, Hart of Butler, Leete of Lawrence.
The committee to decide on the offices of the convention was headed by President Bigelow as follows: Beahm of Montgomery, Hursh
of Harris of Ashtabula, Tetlow of Columbia and Weybrecht of

The convention adjourned until Tuesday at 1 o'clock.
Committee in Session.
Arrangements for registration of delegates is expected to be the action of the committee on rules, which met this morning. As worded, anyone who desires to argue before the committee or to a group of members, must register name and address with the secretary of the convention, state for whom he argues and what he is paid and by whom. Citizens who wish to argue before the member from their own county may register by mail.

The committee also is expected to report upon the rule preventing a delegate becoming a graveyard.
It allows a member to withdraw from a committee, after a week's notice, and place on the convention agenda any proposal he has submitted.

Woman Charged With Murder.

Lawrence, O., Jan. 11.—Charged with murdering her 8-year-old daughter, Ruth Hall, who died Dec. 12 after eating packages containing arsenic, Mrs. Mary Hall, wife of W. C. Hall, of Lawrence, is under arrest on an arrest warrant issued by a Columbus detective who was employed by the state and had commissioner's office in the police station. She was arrested in a pending hearing. Mrs.
Hall is charged with the murder.

Constitutional Convention.

MURDERER CONVERTS HIS HOME INTO FORT

Kills Deputy, But Surrenders
When Militia Appears.

Scottsville, N. Y., Jan. 11.—William Twyman, a negro, while barricaded in the cellar of a house, killed a deputy sheriff and held at bay for five hours the sheriff of Monroe county and his deputies, a detachment of the national guard and nearly every able-bodied man in that section of the county.

He surrendered only on the assurance of another man of his race that no violence would be done if he gave up. His surrender followed the arrival of a detachment of state naval militia with a one-pounder cannon.

Above him as he fought, in the front room of the house, the body of his aged father, whom he had murdered, lay in a litter of liquor bottles, and scarcely a rod from the side of the house, throughout a great part of the siege, the body of Deputy Sheriff Simon W. Birmingham lay where he fell with a hole drilled through his forehead by a bullet from the negro's rifle. Deputy Sheriffs Herbert M. Abbott and Edward A.
Jenkins and a villager, William M.
Vogt, were wounded by Twyman's fire. Twyman has been known as a "bad man" for years. He was a hunter and a dead shot.

VAST SECURITIES BELIEVED SAVED IN BIG FIRE

New York, Jan. 11.—The biggest news that came from the ice palace that was once the Equitable building was the announcement by President William A. Day of the Assurance society that the securities, worth $1-000,000,000 or more, stored in the vaults of the Equitable and the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, are unharmed, and that the $0,000,000 policy on which the Equitable had loaned $70,000,000 had been found intact in the steel cases on the second floor.

TODAY'S NEWS.

Herbert S. Bigelow, president of the Constitutional Convention after being empowered to select committees promises all a "square deal". Much dissatisfaction is expressed at vesting of power in president.

Ohio farmers met yesterday in Columbus and discussed the constitutional convention prospects and decided to submit a few suggestions.

The Steel Trust is ordered by Stanley Investigating Committee to show its books. President Farrell is served with process.

Independent steel companies of the South are charging that the railroads are discriminating against them in rates.

The Columbus Ohio Centennial committee is asking congress for a large appropriation to "help out" in the festivities.

A Plucky Nurse and Her Reward For Saving Life

ACTING on behalf of the Canadian Royal Humane society, Henry W. Darling, treasurer of the General Electric company, recently presented to Miss Sarah Lane of Schenectady the medal of the society. This was done in recognition of the heroism of the young woman, who last summer saved Miss Eliza Knapp from drowning at Point du Chene, New Brunswick. The illustration shows the medal and Miss Lane in the uniform of a graduate nurse, for she expects to continue her work of saving lives as an everyday occupation.

STEEL MEN OF SOUTH OBJECT

Declare Railroads Favor Steel Corporation.

SAY RATES DISCRIMINATING

Alabama and Tennessee Iron Manufacturers Prepare Data For Presentation to Interstate Commerce Commission — Make Claim That Raise of $1 a Ton on Transportation Charges to Ohio River Points Bars Them From Northern Trade.

New York, Jan. 11.—Reductions in freight rates will be urged in an appeal to be submitted to the interstate commerce commission by all of the independent steel and iron companies in Alabama and Tennessee.

Experts are preparing the papers and statistics. The purport of these will be that railroads of the south, particularly the Louisville & Nashville and Southern railway, are maintaining exorbitant rates so that the United States Steel corporation may continue to command the markets of the north and west to the detriment or practical exclusion of all the companies in the south.

The principal point at issue is the freight charge on iron from the Birmingham and Tennessee districts to Ohio river points. In the flush days of the iron industry, in 1906 and the early part of 1907, the railroads advanced freight rates on iron to Ohio river points $1 a ton. At first, when iron was selling at $15 a ton, the railroads advanced the freight rate 50 cents a ton and then, when the price of iron advanced to $20 a ton, the railroads, according to these steel men, elaborated the principle of charging all the traffic would bear and imposed a further charge of 50 cents.

OHIO MINERS WANTING BETTER WAGES GIVEN

Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—When the wage scale committee of District 6, United Mine Workers of America, who are holding their twenty-third annual convention in Columbus, reports today, it is expected an increase will be recommended. It is expected that the recommendation likely will be adopted by the convention and fought by operators.

John P. White of Oskaloosa, Ia., international president of the miners' organization, addressed the Ohio organization. "So long as I am president there will be no reduction in wages," he said. Unofficial returns of the votes cast at the recent election indicate his re-election as president.
According to President White there now is only one strike in the organization. It is in Colorado and affects 2,000 men.

OHIO CITIZENS WANT A BOOST

Ohio Citizens Will Visit Washington to Boost Centennial.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Next Monday the house committee on appropriations will consider the bill introduced by Representative Taylor of the Columbus (O.) district, providing an appropriation of $100,000 for the Columbus Ohio centennial. The entire Buckeye delegation is expected to attend the hearing, in addition to a committee of boosters, consisting of General R. B. Brown of Zanesville, General Charles H. Grosvenor of Athens and John A. Poland of Chillicothe.

Packers Elated

Judge Carpenter Rules Out Part of Pratt's Testimony.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—There was joy in the ranks of the 10 packers on trial in the United States district court here when Judge Carpenter ruled out the testimony of Jerome H. Pratt, insofar as it relates to the identification of figures and notations made on government exhibits, which the witness previously had declared were in the handwriting of J.
Ogden Armour, Arthur Meeker and Thomas Connors, three of the defendants.

But the ruling was no bomb in the camp of the government's attorneys.
The testimony given by Pratt, former manager for Armour & Company, may yet be admitted if experts on handwriting attribute the notations to the men to whom Pratt has ascribed them.

Among other things Pratt testified that four men competed for business in open territory in all districts and the Armour representatives underbid others wherever possible, but none ever went below the minimum price margin fixed for each week and none could sell more goods than the allotted shipment for the week.

ident Farrell.

CARNEGIE GIVES TESTIMONY

Tells House Committee That Is Investigating Business Methods of United States Steel Corporation
How He Beat J. D. Rockefeller on Ore Deal, but Has Bad Memory as to Sale of Property to Combine.
Got $213,000,000 For His Mills.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Intimate books and papers of the United States Steel corporation are to be examined by the government. Chairman Stanley of the house steel trust investigating committee issued subpoenas duces tecum for all the documents, which thus far the steel corporation had not produced, although the committee expressed its desire to examine them. The subpoenas are served directly on J. J. Farrell, as president of the United States Steel corporation.

Andrew Carnegie was a witness before the steel probers and he chuckled every time he recalled how he got the better of John D. Rockeefeller in a deal involving Lake Superior ore. It was an amusing affair for the investigators, some of whom also chuckled.

Shy on Facts.

The committee elicited very little information from Mr. Carnegie that is important in its investigation of the United States Steel corporation.
When it came to getting down to details in regard to the steel corporation, Mr. Carnegie's memory often proved treacherous. He was possitive, however, in his denial that he had held out for a big price on the Carnegie properties, because he knew they were absolutely indispensable to the success of the steel corporation. He named $213,000,000 as the amount that he personally got from the steel corporation for his property, and in his opinion the corporation got a mighty good bargain.

The thought that he has been able to outwit John D. Rockefeller in a business deal pleased Mr. Carnegie immensely. The transaction involved the obtaining by Mr. Carnegie of ore from Rockefeller on a royalty basis of from 15 to 20 cents per ton. The steel corporation has since capitalized the same property on a basis of $1 a ton.

TWO KILLED IN MONTANA'S BIG SNOWSLIDE

St. Paul, Jan. 11.—Caught in a snowslide a mile east of Java, Mont., in the Rocky mountains, Charles Allen and Frank Brulport, engineers of the Great Northern, were carried to death and seven other employees, including Division Superintendent W.
R. Smith and Roadmaster James Garity, suffered injuries.
The rotary plow with which the men were fighting snow rolled 200 feet into Middle Fork river when an avalanche of snow slid down the mountainside upon it.

Dug Out of Snow.

Holland, Mich., Jan. 11.—Eighty passengers on a Pere Marquette train, having been stalled in a snow-drift at East Saultsburg for over 14 hours, were rescued by a relief train.
A road was dug through the snow, which was as high as the coaches, to a farmhouse, where the passengers were provided with food.

Emigrants Caught in Blizzard.
Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 11.—Word reached here of the rescue, west of Rawlins, of a family of six who were caught in a terrific blizzard while traveling overland in a covered wagon. They were almost dead when found. Their names have not been learned. The family consisted of the parents and four children.

Maple Grove M. E. Church Threatened by Fire Fiend

Catches Fire While Revival Services Were in Progress Tuesday Morning---Saved by Strenuous Work of Members.

Maple Grove M. E. church, located on the White pike just north of Plano in Wayne township, was badly damaged by fire near the noon hour Tuesday, and saved from total destruction by the hard work of the members who were attending morning services.

The fire started in the ceiling around the flue, being caused by the roaring fire which had been built to keep the house warm, as it is heated with two stoves. Falling plastering first gave warning that the ceiling was on fire. This occurred immediately after the morning sermon.

As soon as the blaze was discovered, services ended in confusion, and a bucket brigade was formed to extinguish the fire. A number of those present climbed into the garret and their work soon proved effective and the fire was extinguished after entailing a loss estimated at $100 to $200, which was fully covered by insurance.

Maple Grove church is a large frame structure, and the pride of the Maple Grove society. Owing to its highly inflammable nature a few minutes' delay on the part of those who fought the fire, would have meant the destruction of the building. A school house stands nearby, and it would have been consumed had the church burned.

Revival meeting, which has been in progress several days, was dismissed indefinitely until repairs are made.

Both Hands Frozen In Bad Condition

Hattie Scott, aged about 40 years, living near Selden, is suffering intensely from a pair of badly frozen hands, sustained one night the first of the week, while walking to her home from the station at Rattlesnake or Glendon.

Mrs. Scott was in this city and left on the west-bound evening train, which was late. She was carried to Glendon, and in walking back toward home both hands were frozen stiff up to the wrists, and for a time it was thought amputation would be necessary.

During the past day or two her hands have healed somewhat, and Dr. L. M. McFadden, the attending physician, believes amputation will not be necessary.

Neighbors gave the woman shelter or she would probably have met death on her way home.

Sealed Box Removed From Corner Stone

Shortly before one o'clock Thursday afternoon the badly broken cornerstone of the Masonic Temple was removed, disclosing the sealed copper box some 4 by 8 by 10 inches, which was placed in the corner stone when the building was erected.

This box was placed in the hands of leading Masons, who in turn had it placed in the Midland bank vault for safekeeping until the question of whether to open the box or place it together with another, in the new cornerstone, is determined.

The copper box contains current issue of the local newspapers at the time the stone was laid, records of the Masonic lodge, and many articles of interest and value. The box was in a good state of preservation.

Snow Blocks Roads Mails Are Delayed

The drifting snow during the first of the week piled so high in the middle of many of the roads that it was impossible in many instances to drive through the huge drifts until a passageway was cleared with shovels.

Some of the mail carriers in the county were forced to turn back and leave part of their routes unfinished. A number of rigs were overturned and the occupants escaped with difficulty. A traveling man who was driving near Millersville had an experience he will not soon forget when his horse tumbled into the roadside ditch upon its back, and it required hard work upon the part of neighbors to remove the unfortunate horse.

The Springfield and Washington traction cars were compelled to run through seven-foot drifts in order to complete their journey between South Charleston and Springfield.

Acetylene Light Plant Lets Go

The general store of Acton Brothers at Millersville, was threatened by fire about ten o'clock Thursday, when the acetylene light plant exploded, blowing the plant to pieces.

Both Hands Frozen In Bad Condition

Hattie Scott, aged about 40 years, living near Selden, is suffering intensely from a pair of badly frozen hands, sustained one night the first of the week, while walking to her home from the station at Rattlesnake or Glendon.

Mrs. Scott was in this city and left on the west-bound evening train, which was late. She was carried to Glendon, and in walking back toward home both hands were frozen stiff up to the wrists, and for a time it was thought amputation would be necessary.

During the past day or two, her hands have healed somewhat, and Dr. L. M. McFadden, the attending physician, believes amputation will not be necessary.

Neighbors gave the woman shelter or she would probably have met death on her way home.

Snow Blocks Roads Mails Are Delayed

The drifting snow during the first of the week piled so high in the middle of many of the roads that it was impossible in many instances to drive through the huge drifts until a passageway was cleared with shovels.

Some of the mail carriers in the county were forced to turn back and leave part of their routes unfinished. A number of rigs were overturned and the occupants escaped with difficulty. A traveling man who was driving near Milledgeville had an experience he will not soon forget when his horse tumbled into the roadside ditch upon its back, and it required hard work upon the part of neighbors to remove the unfortunate horse.

The Springfield and Washington traction cars were compelled to run through seven-foot drifts in order to complete their journey between South Charleston and Springfield.

Fresh supply Mrs. Austin's Bag Buckwheat now on hand at your grocers.

Acetylene Light Plant Lets Go

The general store of Acton Brothers at Milledgeville, was threatened by fire about ten o'clock Thursday, when the acetylene light plant exploded, blowing the plant to pieces.

Herman Acton was using a red hot poker to repair the machine when it exploded, the gas igniting from the poker. He escaped uninjured, except being badly frightened for a few moments.

Bonds of Baker Traction Will Soon Be On Sale

By the first of February bonds in the sum of $300,000 for building the Springfield and Washington Electric road from South Charleston to this city, will be on sale, and indications are that no trouble will be experienced in floating the issue.

Mr. George W. Baker, owner of the present traction, expressed himself as well pleased with the prospects ahead and if everything progresses as indicated at the present time, actual work will commence upon the extension as soon as the spring weather arrives, and the road completed before snow flies.

The sale of bonds and stock will, in all probability, be made through one of the local banks. Springfield and South Charleston capitalists have announced their readiness to do their part in taking up the new bonds and stock.

Bill Humphreys Returns Appearance Causes Alarm

Applied at Home of Wade Keaton, Who Refused Admittance,
Then Went to Bloomingburg---Found at Madison Mills.

Wade Keaton appeared at police headquarters Wednesday night about 7:30, very much excited, and told a story of how William Humphreys, the man whom William McKitterick shot Sunday night when the man drew a knife on him, had appeared at his door and demanded admittance, but was refused.

According to Keaton's story there was a rap upon the door, followed by the voice of Humphreys, asking admittance from the cold and saying he wanted a cup of coffee. This was refused by Keaton, and the man soon left.

As soon as possible Keaton left the house and appeared at police headquarters, believing Humphreys had returned for no good purpose. The police commenced a search for the man, and although a most careful search was made until late in the night, no trace of Humphreys could be found.

The McKitterick family was notified of the probable presence of their deadly enemy, and caused a great deal of alarm among them.

Late Thursday morning it was learned that Humphreys appeared in Bloomingburg about nine o'clock Wednesday night, and was placed in the village lock-up for the night, being released early Thursday morning.

It subsequently developed that Humphreys had been put off the evening train at Selden, and had walked into this city, applying for food and protection. He claimed to be on his way to Columbus. After learning that the police were after him he went on to Bloomingburg. Upon being released he disappeared, but it was not known what direction he went.

As soon as the affair reached the ears of Mayor Smith he issued orders to have him apprehended if he could be located, and will send him to the workhouse under the sentence which he violated upon his return here.

HUMPHREYS CAPTURED.

Thursday afternoon word was received from Madison Mills, saying that Humphreys was under arrest at that place, and the local authorities made arrangements to bring him back to this city at once.

It seems that Humphreys had reached Madison Mills, where Chief McCoy had made arrangements for his arrest, having anticipated that he would drop in the Dorn store at that point, which he did. The constable of Madison was summoned when Humphreys appeared, and took him in tow.

Buena Vista Institute And Corn Show Success Weather Cuts Attendance

The annual Farmers' Institute and Corn and Poultry Show at Buena Vista this week was a pronounced success regardless of the very disagreeable weather which prevailed during both days' session.

The program was carried out to the letter, with the exception of the lectures by R. A. Haynes. Mr. Haynes was unable to be present, and Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, of Northern Ohio, proved a very able substitute for the absent speaker.

All of the lectures were exceptionally fine, and showed careful study and wide experience upon the part of the lecturers. What was lacking in point of numbers present was made up in the interest manifested at all times during the Institute.

The special numbers of the program proved interesting and entertaining, and the music furnished by the Sabina Concert Company was a constant source of delightful entertainment.

The musical Tuesday night was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed.

The corn show proved far ahead of the one held last year, and a great many exhibits of unusually fine corn made up the show. This feature added interest to the Institute, and attracted the attention of everyone.

The poultry show was not as good as it would have been if the weather conditions had permitted. The poultry and other exhibits drew their share of attention.

It was unanimously voted to hold another institute, corn and poultry show next year, and this will be done accordingly. Those in charge of the last meeting did their part very creditably.

New officers chosen for the coming year are: President, Wm. McCord; vice president, Henry Todhunter; secretary, E. A. Carson; treasurer, Thomas Worthington.

THEY WOULD BE SHERIFF TWO CANDIDATES ENTER

Willard E. Martin Will Contend for the Republican Nomination

IN THE NEXT MAY PRIMARY

C. P. Luttrell Has Announced Himself as a Candidate for the Democratic Nomination.

Mr. C. P. Luttrell, a well known merchant, farmer and stockraiser, residing west of Octa in the northwestern part of the county, has unequivocally announced himself as candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff in the May primary election.

Mr. Luttrell has lived in Fayette county practically all his life, his parents moving to this county from Clinton county when he was but one year old.

He has a wide circle of friends throughout the county and is especially well known in the northern and western sections.

At the same time with Mr. Luttrell's declaration, comes the announcement that Mr. Willard E. Martin, a well known hardware and implement dealer of this city, will enter the race for the Republican nomination for sheriff in the May primary election.

Mr. Martin has for some time past been interested in the Fayette County Hardware Company and its predecessor in business, Glasscock and Martin. He has been the "outside man" with these business concerns and has made a large number of staunch business and political friends.

It is understood that at least two more candidates and probably more, will contend with Mr. Martin for the Republican nomination, and it is by no means certain that Mr. Luttrell will not have opposition in his own party.

We are now located in the Pavey block, Room 6.

July 1, 1883, he was united in marriage with Mary D. Moore. Three children blessed this union, viz., Ellsworth, deceased; Jasper and Mrs. Goldie Callender.

Of the immediate family and relatives there remain his aged mother, his wife, two children, four brothers and three sisters, whose sorrow is shared by a large circle of friends and neighbors, fellow workers in the Kingdom of God, and brethren of the several fraternal orders in which he had membership.

As a husband and father he was all that those words express.

As a worker in the church he was strong, steady, true. He first united with the Baptist church in 1887. United with the Church of Christ, 1909, where he has served as deacon, and member of the official board until his death.

His standing in the church, in the orders in which he had membership, and in the community was indicated by the unusually large attendance at the funeral services at the Christian church held at 10 o'clock, a. m., Tuesday, January 9. A large representation of the church, Knights of the Golden Eagle, Red Men and the city generally taxed the capacity of the building.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Another aid to the back to the farm movement which must soon set in if the nation is to produce as it consumes, is the suggestion that an agricultural school or an experimental station be established in the outskirts of every large city in the country.

It is urged by the advocates of this plan that it would solve the high cost of living or the cost of high living problem by directing the attention of the rising generations to the problem of production, teaching them to realize that the nation must produce before it can consume and indelibly fixing, while the brain is still susceptible of receiving, lasting impressions, the fact that we cannot all be consumers and that there is both prosperity and happiness on the producers side of the circle of life.

The argument that if the schools teach agriculture, that work or profession as it has now grown to be, will become more popular, and as a consequence, when once its advantages, as well as its importance is understood, we will have more farmers and better farmers and more production and more resources is certainly entitled to the earnest consideration of those who are appreciative of the disastrous consequences which now obtain and which will grow more serious each succeeding year if the present exodus to the cities is not checked.

If the youth of the nation could only be brought to a realization of the fact that in the cities there are thousands and thousands of people who barely eke out a miserable existence while on the farm there is plenty of work and plenty of profit and peace and contentment, the problem which has troubled those who think, would be solved.

For some time the drive has been to attach a "commercial course" to all the public schools, and it has succeeded to such an extent that now a "commercial course" is a part of the public school studies in almost every city, large and small, in the land.

The results of this abundant opportunity for commercial education and the lack of opportunity for an agricultural education, are now becoming apparent. The youth of the land have grown to see only one path open to them—the commercial life. That is the only one they have been taught.

A switch to the agricultural course for a while might help solve the problem.

As it is now our city boys are not taught the advantages of the farm life, and the boy on the farm is afforded every opportunity to familiarize himself with the commercial life.

AT IT AGAIN.

A contributor to the columns of The Chicago Record Herald has started something which will result in much discussion pro and con before it is dropped, because the chances are that it never will be settled.

The writer insists that the people who remain awake until 12 o'clock on the night of December 31st and immediately on the stroke of twelve welcome the New Year, are all dead wrong. Not until the clock strikes one is the New Year commenced.

We can't see it the Chicago way. When the clock chimes twelve on the night of December 31st, the full twenty-four hours of that day have been tolled off and when the clock strikes one the first hour of the New Year has been passed through—completed.

The end of the century argument disproves the Chicago writer's theory instead of proving it. Those who insisted that December 31st, 1899, marked the close of the Nineteenth century, overlooked the fact that until 1900 years had been tolled off we were still in the 19th century.

We prefer, however, to adhere to the "when the clock chimes twelve theory. It has so many things to recommend it. It's older, more romantic by tradition and custom and in addition is one hour earlier. We can do our duty in the welcoming act and get to bed one hour sooner.

American Schools Should All Adopt Folklore

By Dr. JOSEPH JACOBS, President of the American Folklore Society

THE chief trouble with education at present is its tentative and formless character, culminated in the academic elective system which has undermined the virility of the American intellect.

Might we not begin at the very beginning and remedy this in the kindergarten by giving to all American children a common set of folk tales, of folk songs and folk games, and should not this nucleus be formed by the COMMON ELEMENTS OF EUROPEAN FOLKLORE in these branches, which could easily be put into form by a competent folklorist?

EVERY AMERICAN CHILD SHOULD KNOW THE SEVENTY-TWO FAIRY TALES, THE THIRTY OR FORTY BALLADS, THE TWENTY OR THIRTY GAMES WHICH ARE COMMON TO ALL OF THE CHILDREN OF EUROPE, FROM ONE OR OTHER OF WHOM HE TRACES HIS ORIGIN. THUS ONE TOUCH OF FOLKLORE WOULD MAKE THE WHOLE CIVILIZED WORLD KIN.

THE WINTER SACRIFICE.

From out the North the harsh wind leaps,
As bound upon the trail;
Across the sagebrush sea it sweeps,
O'er snow-filled draw and swale;
It howls about the ranch house lone—
The children sob in fright; Frost dims the pane through which has shone
One warm and friendly light.

Across the plain the cold winds fly—
On, o'er the open waste;
A thousand voices seem to cry:
"Make haste—oh, still make haste!"
And, huddled in the moonlight clear,
Far from corral and pen,
What are the creatures freezing here—
These are the Friends of Men.

The Friends of Men—with heads that droop
And eyes that death shall close;
About their shivering forms there swoop
The demons of the snows;
The Friends of Men—theirs to give all—
Men's baseness have they learned;
Left on the wintry plains to fall
For friendship unreturned!

Resignations of Entire French Cabinet Tendered Fallieres.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Premier Caillaux has found it impossible to patch up a cabinet and has placed his resignation and those of his cabinet in the hands of President Fallieres.

The immediate difficulty was to fill the ministry of marine. M. Theophile Delcasse, the present minister of marine, had undertaken to accept the foreign portfolio, but Admirals Germinet and Aubert and Senator Boudin successively refused to fill the place which Delcasse would leave vacant. This was sufficient proof that nobody was anxious to enter a moribund ministry.

The Coffee Substitute With the Coffee Taste

The only substitute in all the world that has the coffee flavor and the coffee satisfaction—without one of coffee's bad after-effects.

In coffee, it is caffeine that causes all the trouble. In Fitch's GRAINS OF HEALTH a special high-grade blend of coffee is so combined with roots, herbs and vegetables that the caffeine is counteracted.

The combination has a health building effect. Physicians recommend it. Even children can drink it. Fitch's GRAINS OF HEALTH is sold by all leading grocers. The price is 30 cents the pound package. It is ground, ready for use. It is just as easy to prepare as coffee. But only half as much of Fitch's GRAINS OF HEALTH is required as coffee. Therefore it costs only half as much as good coffee.

If your grocer cannot supply you, write us, mentioning his name, and we will send you a generous sample package of Fitch's GRAINS OF HEALTH (enough to serve a large family at breakfast) and a booklet telling you all about Fitch's GRAINS OF HEALTH. Enclose 6 cents in stamps for postage.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Another aid to the back to the farm movement which must soon set in if the nation is to produce as it consumes, is the suggestion that an agricultural school or an experimental station be established in the outskirts of every large city in the country.

It is urged by the advocates of this plan that it would solve the high cost of living or the cost of high living problem by directing the attention of the rising generations to the problem of production, teaching them to realize that the nation must produce before it can consume and indelibly fixing, while the brain is still susceptible of receiving, lasting impressions, the fact that we cannot all be consumers and that there is both prosperity and happiness on the producers side of the circle of life.

The argument that if the schools teach agriculture, that work or profession as it has now grown to be, will become more popular, and as a consequence, when once its advantages, as well as its importance is understood, we will have more farmers and better farmers and more production and more resources is certainly entitled to the earnest consideration of those who are appreciative of the disastrous consequences which now obtain and which will grow more serious each succeeding year if the present exodus to the cities is not checked.

If the youth of the nation could only be brought to a realization of the fact that in the cities there are thousands and thousands of people who barely eke out a miserable existence while on the farm there is plenty of work and plenty of profit and peace and contentment, the problem which has troubled those who think, would be solved.

For some time the drive has been to attach a "commercial course" to all the public schools, and it has succeeded to such an extent that now a "commercial course" is a part of the public school studies in almost every city, large and small, in the land.

The results of this abundant opportunity for commercial education and the lack of opportunity for an agricultural education, are now becoming apparent. The youth of the land have grown to see only one path open to them—the commercial life. That is the only one they have been taught.

A switch to the agricultural course for a while might help solve the problem.

As it is now our city boys are not taught the advantages of the farm life, and the boy on the farm is afforded every opportunity to familiarize himself with the commercial life.

Fayette County's Delegate In Constitutional Convention

Fayette county is represented in the Constitutional convention, now in session at Columbus, by Mr. Humphrey Jones, one of the leading lawyers at the local bar.

Mr. Jones, in addition to enjoying a reputation second to no man in this section of the state, as an attorney and counselor at law, has large farming interests in this county and in Indiana and Illinois. He is the president of and one of the largest stockholders in The Peoples and Drivers bank of this city, one of our solid financial institutions.

Mr. Jones is one of the largest cattle and sheep raisers of this section of the state. He has been a deep student of governmental problems for a number of years, and particularly has he given the questions pertaining to government, a great deal of thought, as those principles of government affect the farming and business interests of the state and nation.

According to his own statement he goes to the convention with certain definite ideas as to just what should be done in the way of changing the basic law of the state, but is not so firmly fixed in his opinions that he is not open to conviction by the advocates of any suggestions which will be made.

While progressive in the broader and truer meaning of the word, yet he may be classed as a conservative, in that he is in no sense an extremist, and with all, is thoroughly practical in his ideas.

Mr. Jones is eminently qualified by experience and training as well as by natural ability to carefully safeguard the interests of his constituents in the great convention now in session at Columbus.

It is safe to say that he will be found ably advocating every really sound progressive suggestion and firmly opposed to all impractical ideas which mean harm in their actual application if embodied in the fundamental law of the state.

Mr. Jones is an able and convincing talker, a man with a broad conception of the duties and responsibilities of the position, thoroughly equipped mentally and physically to urge or defend any proposition which he believes sound.

It is the general opinion in this section that Mr. Jones will be heard from before the convention is at an end.

Quarterly meeting will be held at Union Chapel, Jan. 14, 15 and 16. Rev. Cherrington will have charge of the service.

Miss McCoy, teacher of the Merriweather school, who has been confined to her home for the past week on account of sickness was able to take charge of her school Wednesday. Miss Leora Whiteside has been teaching during her sickness.

Cold and stormy weather has been very severe during the past week. The snow Tuesday made the roads almost impassable. Several buggies were overthrown by the high wind. Lee Vance, the proprietor of the Bloomingburg livery barn had a rig in this vicinity which was overturned three times before it could return. Starley Anderson's buggy was overthrown, frightening his horse, causing it to get away from him. No severe injuries resulted so far as known.

J. H. Baldwin was a business visitor in Washington Saturday.

The "shoot" last Saturday was handicapped because of the extremely bad weather.

Mr. R. H. Barnes, of Piqua, O., visited George Barnes at this place Tuesday and Wednesday.

The quarantine has been removed from the Hilsheimer family, and all danger of an epidemic is past.

Protracted meeting, which has been in progress for the past week, has been postponed until the weather becomes warmer.

Re-organization of our Sunday school was in order immediately after preaching last Sunday and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Supt., E. A. Parrett; assistant, Will Hopkins; secretary, Virgie Hopkins; treasurer, Ellis Noble; organist, Mrs. Dwight King; assistant, Maude Eggleston; chorister, Ellis Noble; librarian, Howard Hopkins and Ruth Hanna. Teachers will be appointed next Sunday. Our Sunday school is in a flourishing condition.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

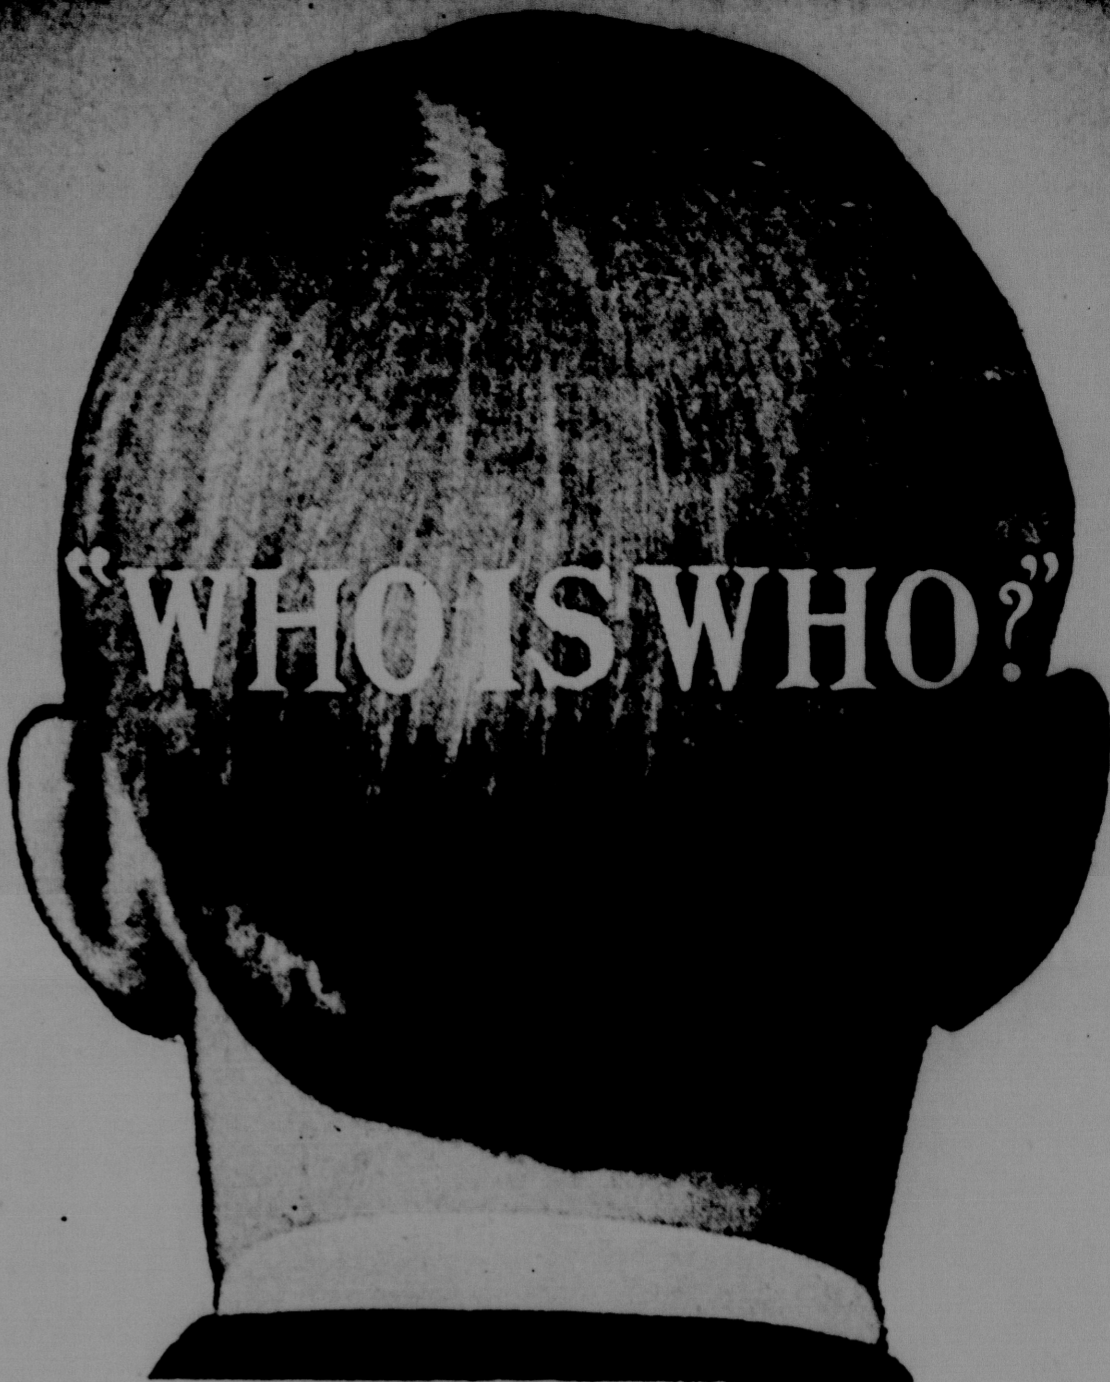

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store. Blackmer & Tanquary.

Mother Under Arrest For Poisoning Daughter

Sensational developments in the mysterious poisoning case of Lancaster, when the mother was arrested Wednesday charged with having placed the arsenic in the flour, and causing the death of her daughter, Ruth Hall, aged 13 years.

The child's death occurred on December 12th, and other members of the family lingered between life and death for some time. The mother, Nancy Hall, has been ill since the child's death, apparently worrying incessantly night and day.

Suspicion having pointed strongly toward the woman being implicated in the crime, caused a warrant to be issued for her arrest upon the charge of poisoning her own daughter. Chief of Police Wallace placed the woman under arrest, removing her to the Fairfield county jail in an automobile.

The alleged reason for the crime is said to be insurance carried by various members of the family. That she intended to poison other members of the family is believed by the Lancaster authorities.

Pythian Festival Will Soon Occur

The Knights of Pythias of Ohio are arranging to hold a big festival at Columbus, January 24th, and extensive arrangements are being made by the Pythian association of Franklin county for the reception and entertainment of prominent members of the order from all over the country. The supreme officers will be the guests of honor and addresses will be delivered by Supreme Chancellor Judge George M. Hanson, of Calais, Me., and H. P. Brown, past supreme chancellor, Cleburne, Tex.

During the day there will be entertainment features, receptions, etc., and the guests of honor will be given an automobile ride over the city. Should the weather permit there will be a big military parade, in which practically every Knights of Pythias regiment in the state will be represented. In any event there will be a large uniform representation there to do escort duty.

In the evening a big Pythian meeting will be held at Memorial hall. Governor Harmon will be present at this meeting to welcome the guests on behalf of the state, and Mayor Karb will deliver the welcoming address on behalf of the city. Both Governor Harmon and Mayor Karb, as well as the supreme officers of the order, will be escorted to the hall by military detachments. A reception will be tendered the supreme officers during the day in one of the hotels, to be selected as the headquarters hotel.

The local arrangements are in the hands of the Franklin County Pythian Association, and J. M. Izer, president of that association, is chairman of the general committee. Brigadier General T. J. Kauffman, of Dayton, commanding the Ohio brigade, Knights of Pythias, will have charge of the military features and will be assisted by the colonels of the Ohio regiments. Invitations are being sent to all members of the organization in the state to be present.

SPRINGS NEW SCHEME

President Murphy Has Plan for Training Ball Players.

Cub Magnate Says Fulfillment of His Purpose Would Develop Many Unknown Stars—Would Revolutionize Present Ideas.

Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Cubs, today is shining in a brand new role as an inventor. The Cub chief divulged a scheme which may revolutionize spring training trips of major league leagues. He has proposed the organization of a "winter league" to train drafted and purchased players for their debut in higher society.

This league would be composed of towns in Florida where baseball can be played the year around. The circuit will be composed of eight towns in Florida. The following places have been proposed for the new training camps of the big league clubs: Key West, Pensacola, Tampa, Miami, Orlando, Palm Beach, St. Augustine and Sarasota.

These towns are winter resorts to which people of means flock when the snow begins to fly in the northern states. They are amply populated to give splendid support to teams scheduled for the proposed circuit.

President Murphy, in defining plans for this winter league, said he would recommend that it be composed of players who had not been members of a major league club for more than three months. All teams of the National and American leagues would be eligible to send players drafted or purchased to these towns for the "trying out" process. It would do more toward showing the real class of a player, he thinks, than a training trip could possibly accomplish.

Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year could be reserved each season for games with major league clubs, the Cub chief thinks, and these games would prove in time the leading sporting events of the winter calendar.

Advocates of a substitute for the present methods of training the raw material for big league consumption are increasing each year. Just how many adherents of this scheme Murphy can marshal for the movement is doubtful.

"The case of Charles Moore, an infielder, who came as a recruit from the Pacific Coast league to the Cincinnati club last spring, only illustrates the injustice of the present method," said the Cub head.

"Moore was with the Cincinnati club just two days when he was returned to the Los Angeles club. He proved a bright star on that club from the jump. Was he given a chance to show what he had to deliver? I should say not. The Cincinnati club saw its mistake and wanted him back this season.

"They were too late. I had secured the youngster through draft. He will be with the Cubs next season. If there had been a "winter league" of purchased and drafted players in existence last year, do you suppose Moore would have been out on the coast in 1911. I think not. He is only one of many players of major size who aren't given a chance under the present crude system in vogue for "trying out" young material."

"Emily!"

"You are not angry? You will not be angry? You know I can do nothing else; please say you know."

He came nearer and took both cold little hands in his clasp, bending to her the shining gravity of his regard.

"Do you think me such a selfish animal, my dear, that I would have kissed you when I could not claim you?" he asked. "Did you think I could forget you were Emily French, even by moonlight?"

Her fair head fell back, her dark eyes questioned his.

"You—mean—"

"I mean that even your uncle can not deny my inherited quality of gentleman. I am no millionaire incognito.

I have driven racing cars and managed this factory to earn my living, having no other dependence than upon myself, but my blood is as old as yours, little girl, if that means anything."

"Not to me," she cried, looking up into his eyes. "Not to me, but to him, I cared for you—"

He drew her toward him, unresisting, their gaze still on each other. As from the first, there was no shyness between them, but the strange, exquisite understanding now made perfect.

"I was right to come to you," he declared, after a time. "Right to fear that you were troubled, conscientious lady. But I must go back, or there will be a fine disturbance at the beach. And I have shattered my other plans to insignificant fragments, or you have. If I did not forget by moonlight that you were Emily French, I certainly forgot everything else."

She looked up at him, her softly-tinted face bright as his own, her yellow hair ruffled into flossy tendrils under the black ribbon binding it.

"Everything else?" she echoed. "Is there anything else but this?"

"Nothing that counts to me. You for my own, and this good world to live in—I stand bareheaded before it all. But yet, I told you once that I had a purpose to accomplish; a purpose now very near completion. In a few months I meant to leave Frenchwood."

Emily gave a faint cry.

"Yes, for my work would have been done. Then I fell in love and upset everything. When I tell Mr. French that I want you, I will have to leave at once."

"Why? You said—"

"How brave are you, Emily?" he asked. "I said your uncle could not question my name or birth, but I did not say he would want to give you to me. Nor will he; unless I am mistaken. Are you going to be brave enough to come to me, knowing he has no right to complain, since you and I together have given him Dick?"

"He does not know you; how can you tell he does not like you?" she urged.

"Do you think he likes 'Darling' Lestrangle of the race course?"

The sudden keen demand disconcerted her.

"I hear a little down there," he added. "I have not been fortunate with your kinsman. No, it is for you to say whether Ethan French's unjust caprice is a bar between us. To me it is none."

"I thought there was to be no more trouble," she faltered, distressed.

Lestrangle looked down at her steadily, his gray eyes darkening to an expression she had never seen.

"Have I no right?" was his question. "Is there no canceling of a claim, is there no subsequent freedom? Is it all no use, Emily?"

Vaguely awed and frightened, her fingers tightened on his arm in a panic of surrender.

"I will come to you, I will come! You know best what is right—I trust you to tell me. Forgive me, dear, I wanted to—"

He silenced her, all the light flashing back to his face.

"A promise, hush! Oh, I shall win tonight with that singing in my ears. I have more to say to you, but not now. I must see Bailey, somehow, before I go."

"He is at the house; let me send him here to you."

"If you come back with him."

They laughed together.

"I will— Do you know," her color deepened rosily, "they call you 'Darling'?"

"I have never heard your own name."

"My name is David," Lestrangle said quietly, and kissed her for farewell.

The earth danced under Emily's feet as she ran across the lawns, the sun glowed warm, the brook tinkled over the cascades in a very madness of mirth. At the head of the veranda steps she turned to look once more at the roof of the white pavilion among the locust trees.

"Uncle will like you when he knows you," she laughed in her heart. "Any one must like you."

The servant she met in the hall said that Mr. Bailey had gone out, and Mr. French, also, but separately, the former having taken the short route across toward the factory. That way Emily went in pursuit, intending to overtake him with her pony cart.

But upon reaching the stables, past which the path ran, she found Bailey himself engaged in an inspection of the limousine in company with the chauffeur.

"You'll have to look into her differential, Anderson," he was pronouncing, when the young girl came beside him.

"Come, please," she urged breathlessly.

"Come?" repeated Bailey, wheeling, with his slow, benevolent smile. "Sure, Miss Emily, where?"

She shook her head, not replying until they were safely outside; then:

"To Mr. Lestrangle; he is in the pavilion. He wants to see you."

"To Lestrangle!" he almost shouted, halting. "Lestrangle here?"

"Yes. There is time; he says there is time. He is going back as soon as he sees you."

"But what's he doing here? What does he mean by risking his neck without any practice?"

"He came to see me," she whispered, and stood confessed.

"God!" said Bailey, quite reverently, after a moment of speechless stupefaction. "You, and him!"

She lifted confiding eyes to him, moving nearer.

"It is a secret, but I wanted you to know because you like us both. Dick said you loved Mr. Lestrangle."

"Yes," was the dazed assent.

"Well, then— But come, he is waiting."

She was sufficiently unlike the usual Miss French to bewilder any one. Bailey dumbly followed her across the park, carrying his hat in his hand.

A short distance from the pavilion Emily stopped abruptly, turning a startled face to her companion.

"Some one is there," she said. "Some one is speaking. I forgot that Uncle Ethan had gone out."

She heard Bailey catch his breath oddly. Her own pulses began to beat with heavy irregularity, as a few steps farther brought the two opposite the open arcade. There they halted, frozen.

In the place Emily had left, where all her feminine toys still lay, Mr. French was seated as one exhausted by the force of overmastering emotion; his hands clenched on the arms of the chair; his face drawn with passion. Opposite him stood Lestrangle, colorless and still as Emily had never conceived him, listening in absolute silence to the bitter address pouring from the other's lips with a low-toned violence indescribable.

"I told you then, never again to come here," first fell upon Emily's conscious hearing. "I supposed you were at least French enough to take a dismissal. What do you want here, money? I warned you to live upon the allowance sent every month to your bankers, for I would pay no more even to escape the intolerable disgrace of your presence here. Did you imagine me so desecrated that I would accept even you as a successor? Wrong; you are not missed. My nephew Richard takes your place, and is fit to take it. Go back to Europe and your low-born wife; there is no lack in my household."

The voice broke in an excess of savage triumph, and Lestrangle took the pause without movement or gesture.

"I am going, sir, and I shall never come back," he answered, never more quietly. "I can take a dismissal, yes. If ever I have wished peace or hoped for an accord that never existed between us, I go tired of such folly. But hear this much, since I am arraigned at your bar: I have never yet disgraced your name or mine unless by the boy's mischief which sent me from college. The money you speak of, I have never used; ask Bailey of it, if you will." He hesitated, and in the empty moment there came across the mile of June air the roaring noon whistle of the factory. Involuntarily he turned his head toward the call, but as instantly recovered himself from the self-betrayal.

"There is another matter to be arranged, but there is no time now. Nor even in concluding it will I ever come here again, sir."

There was that in his bearing, in the dignified carefulness of courtesy with which he saluted the other before turning to go, that checked even Ethan French. But as Lestrangle crossed the threshold of the little building, Emily ran from the thicket to meet him, her eyes a dark splendor in her white face, her hands outstretched.

"Not like this!" she panted. "Not without seeing me! Oh, I might have guessed—"

His vivid color and animation returned as he caught her to him, heedless of witnesses.

"You dare? My dear, my dear, not even a question? There is no one like you. Say, shall I take you now, or send Dick for you after the race?"

Mr. French exclaimed some inarticulate words, but neither heard him.

"Send Dick," Emily answered, her eyes on the gray eyes above her. "Send Dick—I understand. I will come."

He kissed her once, then she drew back and he went down the terraces toward the gates. As Emily sank down on the bench by the pavilion door, Bailey brushed past her, rummaging after the straight, lithe figure that went steadily on out of sight among the huge trees planted and tended by five generations of Frenches.

When the vistas of the park were empty, Emily slowly turned to face her uncle.

"You love David French?" he asked, his voice thin and harsh.

"Yes," she answered. She had no need to ask if Lestrangle were meant.

"He is married to some woman of the music halls."

"No."

"How do you know? He has told you?"

She lifted to him the superb confidence of her glance, although nervous tremors shook her in wavelike succession.

"If he had been married, he would not have made me care for him. He has asked me to be his wife."

They were equally strange to each other in these new characters, and equally spent by emotion. Neither moving, they sat opposite each other in silence. So Bailey found them when he came back later, to take his massive stand in the doorway, his hands in his pockets and his strong jaw set.

"I think that things are kind of mixed up here, Mr. French," he stated grimly. "I guess I'm the one to straighten them out a bit. I've loved Mr. David from the time he was a kid and never saw him get a square deal yet. You asked him what he was doing here—I'll tell you; he is Lestrangle."

There is a degree of amazement which precludes speech; Mr. French looked back at his partner, mute.

"He is Lestrangle. He never meant you to know; he'd have left without your ever knowing, but for Miss Emily. I guess I don't need to remind you of what he's done; if it hadn't been for him we might have closed our doors some day. He understands the business as none of us back-number, old-fashioned ones do; he took hold and shook some life into it. We can make cars, but he can make people buy them. Advertising! Why, just that fool picture he drew on the back of a pad, one day, of a row of thermometers up to one hundred forty, with the sign 'Mercuries are at the top,' made more people notice."

Bailey cleared his throat. "He was always making people notice, and laughing while he did it. He's risked his neck on every course going, to bring our cars in first, he's lent his fame as a racing driver to help us along. And now everything is fixed the way we want, he's thrown out. What did he do it for? He thought he needed to square accounts with you, for being born, I suppose; so when he heard how things were going with us he came to me and offered his help. At least, that's what he said. I believe he came because he couldn't bear to see the old place go under."

There was a skein of blue silk swinging over the edge of the table. Mr. French picked it up and replaced it in Emily's work basket before replying.

"If this remarkable story is true," he began, accurately precise in accent.

"You don't need me to tell you is," retorted Bailey. "You know what my new manager's been doing; why, you disliked him without seeing him, but you had to admit his good work. And I heard you talking about his allowance, Mr. French. He never touched it, not from the first. It piled up for six years. Last April, when we needed cash in a hurry, he drew it out and gave it to me to buy aluminum. When he left here first he drove a taxicab in New York city until he got into racing work and made Darling Lestrangle famous all over the continent. I guess it went pretty hard for a while; if he'd been the thing you called him, he'd have gone to the devil alone in New York. But he didn't."

"You know, you know! I am not free; I am Emily French. I cannot fall my uncle and grieve him as his son did. Oh, I will never marry any

"Dick Will Tell Me of You."

"Emily!"

"You are not angry? You will not be angry? You know I can do nothing else; please say you know."

He came nearer and took both cold little hands in his clasp, bending to her the shining gravity of his regard.

"Do you think me such a selfish animal, my dear, that I would have kissed you when I could not claim you?" he asked. "Did you think I could forget you were Emily French, even by moonlight?"

Her fair head fell back, her dark eyes questioned his.

"You—mean—"

"I mean that even your uncle cannot deny my inherited quality of gentleman. I am no millionaire incognito."

"I have driven racing cars and managed this factory to earn my living, having no other dependence than upon myself, but my blood is as old as yours, little girl, if that means anything."

"Not to me," she cried, looking up into his eyes. "Not to me, but to him. I cared for you—"

He drew her toward him, unresisting, their gaze still on each other. As from the first, there was no shyness between them, but the strange, exquisite understanding now made perfect.

"I was right to come to you," he declared, after a time. "Right to fear that you were troubled, conscientious lady. But I must go back, or there will be a fine disturbance at the beach. And I have shattered my other plans to insignificant fragments, or you have. If I did not forget by moonlight that you were Emily French, I certainly forgot everything else."

She looked up at him, her softly tinted face bright as his own, her yellow hair ruffled into fussy tendrils under the black ribbon binding it.

"Everything else?" she echoed. "Is there anything else but this?"

"Nothing that counts to me. You for my own, and this good world to live in—I stand bareheaded before it all. But yet, I told you once that I had a purpose to accomplish; a purpose now very near completion. In a few months I meant to leave Frenchwood."

Emily gave a faint cry.

"Yes, for my work would have been done. Then I felt in love and upset everything. When I tell Mr. French that I want you, I will have to leave at once."

"Why? You said—"

"How brave are you, Emily?" he asked. "I said your uncle could not question my name or birth, but I did not say he would want to give you to me. Nor will he; unless I am mistaken. Are you going to be brave enough to come to me, knowing he has no right to complain, since you and I together have given him Dick?"

"He does not know you, how can you tell he does not like you?" she urged.

"Do you think he likes 'Darling' Lestrangle of the race course?"

The sudden keen demand disconcerted her.

"I hear a little down there," he added. "I have not been fortunate with your kinsman. No, it is for you no any whether Ethan French's unjust caprice is a bar between us. To me it is none."

"I thought there was to be no more trouble," she faltered, distressed.

Lestrangle looked down at her steadily, his gray eyes darkening to an expression she had never seen.

"Have I no right?" was his question.

"None to a woman of a claim, is it?"

"None to a woman of a claim, is it?"

pant of surrender.

"I will come to you, I will come! You know best what is right—I trust you to tell me. Forgive me, dear, I wanted to—"

He silenced her, all the light flashing back to his face.

"A promise; hush! Oh, I shall win tonight with that singing in my ears. I have more to say to you, but not now. I must see Bailey, somehow, before I go."

"He is at the house; let me send him here to you."

"If you come back with him."

They laughed together.

"I will—Do you know," her color deepened rosy, "they call you 'Darling,' I have never heard your own name."

"My name is David," Lestrangle said quietly, and kissed her for farewell.

The earth danced under Emily's feet as she ran across the lawns, the sun glowed warm, the brook tinkled over the cascades in a very madness of mirth. At the head of the veranda steps she turned to look once more at the roof of the white pavilion among the locust trees.

"Uncle will like you when he knows you," she laughed in her heart. "Any one must like you."

The servant she met in the hall said that Mr. Bailey had gone out, and Mr. French, also, but separately, the former having taken the short route across toward the factory. That way Emily went in pursuit, intending to overtake him with her pony cart.

But upon reaching the stables, past which the path ran, she found Bailey himself engaged in an inspection of the limousine in company with the chauffeur.

"You'll have to look into her differential, Anderson," he was pronouncing, when the young girl came beside him.

"Come, please," she urged breathlessly.

"Come?" repeated Bailey, wheeling, with his slow, benevolent smile. "Sure, Miss Emily, where?"

She shook her head, not replying until they were safely outside, then:

"To Mr. Lestrangle; he is in the pavilion. He wants to see you."

"To Lestrangle?" he almost shouted, halting. Lestrangle here?"

"Yes. There is time; he says there is time. He is going back as soon as he sees you."

"But what's he doing here? What does he mean by risking his neck without any practice?"

"He came to see me," she whispered, and stood confessed.

"God!" said Bailey, quite reverently, after a moment of speechless stupefaction. "You, and him!"

She lifted confiding eyes to him, moving nearer.

"It is a secret, but I wanted you to know because you like us both. Dick said you loved Mr. Lestrangle."

"Yes," was the dazed assent.

"Well, then— But come, he is waiting."

She was sufficiently unlike the usual Miss French to bewilder any one. Bailey dumbly followed her across the park, carrying his hat in his hand.

A short distance from the pavilion Emily stopped abruptly, turning a startled face to her companion.

"Some one is there," she said. "Some one is speaking. I forgot that Uncle Ethan had gone out."

She heard Bailey catch his breath oddly. Her own pulses began to beat with heavy irregularity, as a few steps farther brought the two opposite the open arcade. There they halted, frozen.

In the place Emily had left, where all her feminine toys still lay, Mr. French was seated as one exhausted by the force of overmastering emotion, his hands clenched on the arms of the chair, his face drawn with passion. Opposite him stood Lestrangle, colorless and still as Emily had never conceived him, listening in absolute silence to the bitter address pouring from the other's lips with a low-toned violence that was deafening.

"I told you then, never again to come here," first fell upon Emily's conscious hearing. "I supposed you were at least French enough to take a dismissal. What do you want here, money? I warned you to live upon the allowance sent every month to your bankers, for I would pay no more even to escape the intolerable disgrace of your presence here. Did you imagine me so deserted that I would accept even you as a successor? Wrong; you are not missed. My nephew Richard takes your place, and is fit to take it. Go back to Europe and your low-born wife; there is no lack in my household."

The voice broke in an excess of savage triumph, and Lestrangle took the pause without movement or gesture.

"I am going, sir, and I shall never come back," he answered, never more quietly. "I can take a dismissal, yes. If ever I have wished peace or hoped for an accord that never existed between us, I go turned of such folly. But hear this much, since I am arraigned at your bar: I have never yet disgraced your name or mine unless by the boy's mischief which sent me from college. The money you speak of, I have never used; ask Bailey of it, if you will."

He hesitated, and in the empty moment there came across the mile of June air the roaring noon whistle of the factory. Involuntarily he turned his head toward the call, but as instantly recovered himself from the self-betrayal. "There is another matter to be arranged, but there is no time now. Nor even in concluding it will I ever come here again, sir."

There was that in his bearing, in the dignified carefulness of courtesy

with which he saluted the other before turning to go, that checked even Ethan French. But as Lestrangle crossed the threshold of the little building, Emily ran from the flicker to meet him, her eyes a dark splendor in her white face, her hands outstretched.

"Not like this!" she panted. "Not without seeing me! Oh, I might have guessed—"

His vivid color and animation returned as he caught her to him, heedless of witnesses.

"You dare? My dear, my dear, not even a question? There is no one like you. Say, shall I take you now, or send Dick for you after the race?"

Mr. French exclaimed some inarticulate words, but neither heard him.

"Send Dick," Emily answered, her eyes on the gray eyes above her.

"Send Dick—I understand. I will come."

He kissed her once, then she drew back and he went down the terraces toward the gates. As Emily sank down on the bench by the pavilion door, Bailey brushed past her, rumpling after the straight, lithe figure that went steadily on out of sight among the huge trees planted and tended by five generations of Frenches.
